

THE NATIONAL JUDICIAL COLLEGE

Est. 1963

How will your judicial legacy continue after you've left the bench?

Long after you and the litigants have left your courtroom, the profound way that you contributed to the rule of law and the administration of justice can be remembered by making a planned gift to The National Judicial College.

The NJC was there for you when you began your career, it provided continuing education when you needed it most, and for some judges, it allowed them to return as an esteemed faculty member and prepare the next generation of adjudicators.

Support the NJC with a Planned Gift and Leave a Legacy after you've left the Bench.

If there are judicial causes you care about, we can help you to have a positive impact by making a Planned Gift to support NJC course development in a specific area of the law. Choose from Administrative Law, Appellate, General Jurisdiction, Military, Special Court or Tribal.

Should you prefer to provide scholarship assistance. . .with a minimum gift of $25,000 you can have a scholarship endowed in your name.

An endowment of $50,000 will generate proceeds to bring a new judge to the two-week General Jurisdiction course.

You don't need great wealth to support the NJC. By taking care of your family first in your will or bequest, then leaving a remainder of your estate to the NJC, you can create a meaningful legacy that matches your interests and circumstances.
